The South African Colorectal Society (SACRS) calls for applications for a one-month observership in the United Kingdom. The observership is a collaboration between the SACRS and The Association of Coloproctology of Great Britain and Ireland (ACPGBI) and is for the period of one month. This opportunity is aimed at colorectal trainees and consultants within five years of qualification and is funded by the ACPGBI.

The observership will take place in June or July 2019 and will include spending time in one or two UK colorectal units of the successful applicants' choice (subject to approval of the unit's head) and attending the ACPGBI congress in Dublin from 1-3 July 2019. It is up to the applicant to approach the units of choice to request approval for the visit.

The ACPGBI will reimburse the successful candidate for economy class flights, reasonable accommodation and subsistence costs, travel within UK and the registration to the annual meeting.

To apply please submit a CV and a letter of motivation to timforgan@sun.ac.za. The successful applicant will be required to write a brief report of what they have gained from the visit for the website and give feedback at the following SACRS congress.

Applications close on 10 January 2019
